

Young Industrial Scientist Award

ACS Division of Agricultural & Food Chemistry

Purpose

To recognize the significant scientific contributions of junior industrial scientists to the commercial fields of agricultural and food chemistry

Nature

The award consists of an engraved plaque and up to $1,000 to off-set travel expenses. Awardees will be expected to present their accomplishments as part of the AGFD technical program during the fall meeting of the ACS.

Rules of Eligibility

A nominee must have made (1) outstanding Scientific and/ or Commercial Contributions, including technical publications, patents and patent application filings, product-ingredient development, analysis methodology, (2) Must have  $\leq 10$  years of industrial service (age  $< 40$ ). (3) Must be full member of the division ( $\geq 5$  years), (4) Must be active in the division, for example: presentations/posters in AGFD technical programs, attendance at AGFD technical programs, service as a symposium organizer, or subdivision officer

Self-nomination for the Award

- A self-nomination letter
- Two letters of support, one of which must be from an AGFD member
- A one page summary of the research - development significance
- A 150-word abstract of the proposed oral presentation
- The nominee's curriculum vitae, including service to AGFD

Deadline for nominations: February 1, 2022

Emails Nominations to:
Brian Guthrie
brian\_guthrie@cargill.com

This award is administered by the Agricultural and Food Chemistry Division of ACS

